A holistic view

Aliana has a front-row seat for the challenges her sister faces in managing her nephew's hemophilia. That's why she feels it's necessary to provide support to the person living with hemophilia and to their entire family.

All about family

Every day, Aliana sets out to be the best aunt and sister she can be. And when her father's kidney failed and he needed a transplant, she was there for him, too, providing the kidney that lets him live without dialysis.

Spreading the word

Joining the bleeding disorders community opened the doors to a vast amount of education and resources. Now she wants to share with others what she has learned—and learn from them in turn.

“There’s always someone new to meet, with a different story and a completely different background. I love hearing their goals, their passions, and seeing how hemophilia is just a small part of their story.”
